Read. Write. Repeat. Honors English 9: Term 1 Reading

Honors English offers students the opportunity (i.e., requires them) to read abundantly from many challenging texts. Most required novels will be checked out to them during class, and the reading will be completed on a fairly rigid schedule. It is important that students complete the reading assignments on time because class time will be used to discuss, clarify, and write about the literature. There will be periodic (unannounced) reading quizzes to make sure students are completing the assigned reading. A reading schedule is provided in advance, so students are expected to complete the reading even when they are absent.

Students: Please follow these guidelines.

- Keep up with the reading schedule...even if you are absent. Don't get behind!
- Take care of the books you are assigned. Fines will be issued for lost or damaged books.
- Keep a record of the book number of your assigned book. That is the book for which you are responsible. Don't lose it!
- Always bring the book to class.
- During class discussions, ask questions and share your observations about the reading.
- You do not have to enjoy every book we read, but you are required to give each one your respectful attention for the time we are reading it. Criticism is okay, but it must be informed criticism, not just childish complaining.
- Keep up with the reading schedule...even if you are absent. Don't get behind!
